

Assistant Professor of Teacher Education

Defiance College Teacher Education is accepting applications for two full-time, tenure-track positions at the rank of Assistant Professor. While successful candidates should have demonstrated ability to teach diverse undergraduate and graduate course offerings, preference will be given to candidates with an earned doctorate in Mathematics Education, Special Education, and P-12 Administration; advanced ABD will be considered.

The faculty members will engage in a private, liberal arts environment with an emphasis on teaching, advising, and service. Within the Teacher Education Program, additional responsibilities include supervision of candidates in practicum and student teaching experiences and supporting the growth of teacher education programming. Ideal candidates will have three or more years of P-12 teaching/administration, experience in college level and online instruction, good interpersonal skills with an emphasis on the importance of collaboration, and a philosophy that aligns with the importance of diversity, equity and inclusion. Teaching load is 12 credit hours per term.

To apply, send a letter of application that addresses the requirements of the position, statement of teaching philosophy, curriculum vitae, sampling of syllabi and student evaluations (if available), and contact information of four professional references electronically to employment@defiance.edu.

Additional information about Defiance College is available at www.defiance.edu. Review of applications will begin January 18, 2022 and applications will be accepted until the position is filled. Position starts in August 2022.

Defiance College is committed to the diversity of faculty, staff, and students. Applicants who will enrich the diversity of our campus and promote a spirit of inclusivity are especially encouraged to apply.
