

Assistant Professor of Special Education

The Educators College at Marian University is seeking a highly talented and exceptional teacher and scholar to serve as the Assistant Professor of Special Education, which is a tenure track eligible position for qualifying candidates. Reporting to the Associate Dean of Academic Quality, this person will provide instructional expertise to educators in the teacher education (graduate and undergraduate) and leadership development programs. This position will also coordinate with the Assistant Dean of Outreach to provide support for services delivered to K-12 schools.

Essential Duties and Responsibilities:

- Teach undergraduate and graduate courses in special education in various delivery modes, including face-to-face, hybrid, and on-line.
- Maintain an active special education-related research agenda that involves publications and presentations at the national level as well as grant writing.
- Provide leadership and service to college and public, private, and charter schools (locally/nationally).
- Recruit and advise students and participate in university and community service.
- Other duties as assigned.

Requirements include:

- Knowledge of and commitment to the mission of Marian University.
- A terminal degree in related field (or ABD if degree will be awarded by August 2017).
- Minimum of 3 years of special education-related K-12 teaching experience.
- Experience in undergraduate and graduate-level special education instruction.

The ideal candidate will also have:

- A record of current and past scholarly and professional activities in literacy education.
- A willingness to work with reform-minded and thought leaders such as the National Council on Teacher Quality, Public Impact, and the like.
- A commitment to supporting all types of schools (public, charter, and Catholic).
- Experience in teaching online or hybrid formats at the undergraduate or graduate level.
