

Dean, College of Education and Professional Development
Huntington, WV

Marshall University seeks applications and nominations for the Dean of the College of Education and Professional Development.

Founded as Marshall Academy in 1837, Marshall University has developed into a public comprehensive research university with a rich history as one of the oldest institutions of higher learning in West Virginia. The institution takes its name in honor of the fourth and longest-serving Chief Justice of the United States, John Marshall.

The College of Education and Professional Development (COEPD), accredited since 1954, is the oldest academic unit within Marshall University, dating back to 1867. Thirty-two educational certifications are offered, including certifications in early childhood, elementary education, secondary education and administration. The College also offers programs in school psychology and clinical mental health counseling. In Fall 2024, COEPD had a total student enrollment of 1771 with 608 undergraduate students and 1163 graduate students.

The successful candidate will be a courageous, strong advocate for the college's academic programs and will ensure high-quality performance in all the college's efforts. Additionally, they will demonstrate a successful track record of building enrollment as well as internal and external partnerships that enhance revenue. A terminal degree is required.

A complete Leadership Profile with information about Marshall University and the position may be found on the AGB Search website. Additional information about COEPD may be found on the Marshall University website.
