

Department Head of Teaching and Learning

The College of Education at Southeastern Louisiana University invites applications for the Department Head of the Department of Teaching and Learning. The department head is the academic and administrative officer of the department and is a twelve-month employee. The department head must be eligible to hold the rank of associate or full professor in teaching, teacher education, or curriculum and instruction. The department head shall be appointed by the President of the University with the approval of the University of Louisiana System and is responsible to the Dean of the College of Education and to the Provost and Vice-President for Academic Affairs. Success in filling assigned responsibilities requires an individual who understands the role of administration, accepts administrative authority and responsibility, and embraces and supports diversity amongst a dynamic group of professionals. The Department Head is active in teaching undergraduate and graduate courses and maintaining a research program appropriate for a department in a college with undergraduate and master's degree programs. The department head must possess personal qualities such as people skills, openness, integrity, problem-solving, negotiating, and leadership in decision-making.

Southeastern Louisiana University is a progressive regional, comprehensive university. The University's home, Hammond, is at the crossroads of Interstates 55 and 12 in the heart of Louisiana's thriving Northshore. It is centrally located within an hour's drive of New Orleans, Baton Rouge (the state capitol), and the Mississippi Gulf Coast, and affords extensive cultural, recreational, and research opportunities. The Department of Teaching and Learning has approximately 700 undergraduate majors and 175 students in our master's degree program.
